

Daddy Lapusse's confession in his hands. He rose solemnly and in grandiloquent terms commented upon Cogolin's chivalrous conduct.... but, to his great regret, he would be obliged to detain him in prison until the Examining Magistrate in Paris had signed the order for his freedom. His captivity however, would be rendered agreeable.

There was no great difficulty in that. A newspaper in the district published a special edition with reference to the Cogolin affair, in which praise was lavished on him. The highest personalities of the town came to visit the modest hero, women offered him flowers, a child attained glory through being kissed by him, and the General called in person to render homage to this sublime prisoner....!....
